Authorities Believe Present Enrollment Will Equal 37-38 Semester

Registration figures soared to 3,320 at the close of the day's enrollment vesterday, it was learned last night from Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain, Uniersity registrar

Enrollment officiais believe that there is a possibility that the final egistration may reach 3,484, the total at the close of registration for the second semester last year.

Students may register throughou this week and final registration will close on Monday, February 13, it was announced yesterday from the registrar's office.

Although the present enrollment is 42 below the enrollment at the same time last year, it is increasing more rapidly than last year's late registration. At the close of registration on Thursday, February 2, registration officials reported 3.185 enroliees which had increased 135 at the final report last night.

Since the school year of 1934-35 cach year's enrollment has been gradually increasing. The depressicn proved a serious handicap to the University when the final figures tropped 800 in 1932.

Let's go into the history of the thing. Remember way back last semester when a half-conjoling, half pleading editorial was written asking for fittle cooperation in this matter of keeping the grass growing? And then do you remember that one that did a little one preaching? And the ones that tried to kid you out of it by offering prozes for crazy slogans?

Of comise von dou't remember. It's fairfy evident now that all of that pleading, preaching, and kidding fell on deaf cars.

Well, it has finally dawned on us that the only way to talk to rats is to use rat language. Unfornimately, journalistic ethics don't permit the worst rat talk to be printed. But you can use your inagination for all its worth and the worst things you can think are just about what we mean when we call you a rat.

Right now, the bare places on the campus have been seeded, the ground is soft, the grass can be killed without much trouble, and if you fail to use the walks, you are not only the worst kind of a rat you're midish, pig headed, sloventy orierous, obnoxious, and one helling citi-

A Course In Marriage— Not For Sensation Seekers

Even the dullest of the dull probably realize that there has been during the past year a concerted effort on the part of major organizations throughout the nation to educate the public to the dangers, treatment, and one of venered diseases. This has been only one part of a new "health-conscionsness" which has embraced inberenfosis, cancer, infamile paralysis, and sex and marriage problems.

On this campus, however, venereal diseases have been stressed, and this year, education on inherentosis will be added to the program. Suppresedly, national Social Hygiene Day on Fehrnary I was to be the focal point of these diversified to observance was held because of registration say it is truse-absolutely speaking. which came on that date.

General Hygiene Problems-Frequently have we stressed the need for orgamization programs on the immuniciable aspects of venereal diseases and on general hygiene problems, and one of the most important head-rings in this list concerns marriage courses. Beginning in 1927 at the University of North Cardina, the movement for marriage courses in colleges and universities has spread until now a embraces over 225 such institutions in the United States. Vassar, Columbia, and Iowa each have one

The Course In Marriage-

These comises are not merely over-grown bullsessions, nor are the students seeking sensational fectures. The question of morals is not emphasized. Assignments are made and considerable outside reading is done. The courses include practical subjects, often suggested by the students themselves, taught by experienced teachers who make this their special field. Among the points discussed are courtship, choice of a mate, enpagement, finances, marital and domestic adpisiments, and birth control.

At North Carolina, at least, the attitude of parents has been completely lavorable, according to a report by the ffittsburgh paper, The Carnegie Tartan. "No doubt remains as to the success of the course, if the word of alumni is used as evidence. One former student, expressing the view of many others, said that not only did the course make his marriage happier, but it gave him an important jusight into life and us proldens in general.

Touching Life Itself-

ffere at the University of Kentucky, in addition to the professional schools like Agriculture, Commerce, Education, Engineering, and Law. we have courses for the preparation of students in Nursing, Social Work, Medical Technology. Teaching, Pre-Medical preparation, Library Scionce, Secretarial Practice-all of which is evidence that we are keeping "abreast of the times." Certainly marriage involves more persons than low one of these vocational studies. A conrse in marriage could not be defined as a vocational stody, nor as a strictly educational study. It emlatees both-it is a basis for life itself. Whe Not Here?

Practical difficulties in installing such a course have presented themselves elsewhere, and would probably turn up here as well. Subject matter must be selected; the credit to be given must be determined; schedules must be arranged; limits on who may take the course must be set; but such difficulties have not proved insurnountable elsewhere, and there is no reason why they should prove so here. Effort must be expended, but certainly the necessity and the desire for such a course justify it.

Q. In your column of January 23 you said that half as cold as 38 degrees above zero was 19 above zero, both temperatures on the Fahren heit thermometer. Will you please check this again and say if it is correct?

A. Rechecking these figures reveals that a slight error was made in the answer. Hall as cold as 38 degrees above zero, instead of being 19 degrees above, really is 211 degrees below zero. This answer was obtained by using the discovery that zero, instead of being the mark on the Fahrenheit thermometer, which reads zero, is really 459 degrees further down the scale. This is called the absolute zero and is the one which scientific and technical readers of this column insist on using in all problems relating to the weather. So it can be figured out that the mark shown on a Fahrenheit thermometer as 38 degrees above zero really is 497 degrees above zero. That is actually the temperature and half of that is 248.5 degrees. But that 38 degrees with which we started will have to come off of that, so the answer is 211 degrees below the Fahrenprograms. But unfortunately, at the University heit zero. - Why Not A Sadie Hawkins
- Day At UK? After
- All, It Started In Dogpatch!

By JIM CALDWELL

The other day we happened to be looking through a copy I the current LIFE, when we happened across several pages of pictures of a recent event held at the University of Wyomng known as Sadie Hawkins day. This immediately caused ts to recall having read of similar happenings at the Univerity of Tonnessee and McGill University in Montreal, and we wondered why it happened that this screwball antic was beginning to be held in many of the states of the U.S. and 'anada—except the very state wherein it was "supposed" to have originated. We figure it is just another case of a famous cerson being recognized in every place except his own town. But it flop—so what? Nothing ventured, is strange that some patriotic soul nothing gained asn't stood up at some time or other and advocated paying tribute o his world-famed "Kentucky hill-

Just as a popular girl is supposed to be complimented by a great number of boys asking to take her to a liance, so is popularity of a male to be judged by the number of women trying to run him down. Wonder how a big, brawny athlete would feel if ite turned out to be o "mib" at a Sadie-style dance?

We don't know whether the Kentuckian's temperament would ailow kim to take to the idea or not. It does seem worth trying, however, for it is rather a shame for the idea to be snubbed in the very state from whence it is supposed to have come It appears to us that there would be everything to gain and nothing to lose by trying it, for look at the fine publicity Kentucky would get if it came to be known that Kentuckians were actually practicing what they preached. And then there is always the chance that it might click, and be tried ngain next year and eventually develop into a tradition-and everyone knows how badly we need traditions on this campus. istachio green. Professor Rannells suggested the ceiling of the billiards room be dark and relative to the color of table from above. Consequently its color scheme consists of darker shades of blue, green, and gray. The reason for the pink-brown combination (essentially the color imparted by the warm violet gray and neutral cerise), Professor Rannells said, is that such a color can be safely used with the furniture and draperies of the room. It makes person's complexion show up to the best advantage. The principles for distibution of olor in the rooms are as follows: 1. Where different values are aiiotted to the different walls, the color on the window side must be lighter in value. Colors opposite windows should be relatively darker in value and may be more Intense

Professor Rannells explained that "value" he meant the "amount of light, i. e., light versus dark, In this case light means "tint" and dark means "shade." simply means color, such as red, vellow, blue, etc.

2. Where two separate hues are used in the same room, and one hue is to appear on two walls, these must be two adjacent walls, never opposite walls. This does not preclude a variation of value and intensity of the line from one wail to the next.

By intensity, Professor Rannells means "amount of hue, i. e., bright versus duil." Bright signifies "intense," and dull, "neutral."

3. The color of the ceiling should be determined by colors already in the room. Make it a tint (lighter value) after hue of the rug or hue The new quarters are furnished

We still haven't received any tatements regarding the practice of wearing freshman caps.
